Selection Process

The Helper Project is proud to support students at many different points in their educational journeys. Applications are reviewed holistically, with thoughtful consideration given to each applicant's goals, experiences, and potential.

One important factor in the review process is the applicant's course of study. We value programs of study that align with the mission of the Helper Project, contribute positively to the broader community, and support personal growth, leadership, and civic engagement. Applicants are encouraged to share how their educational path reflects their passions and aspirations.

Letters of recommendation also play a meaningful role in the evaluation process. Strong letters help us understand an applicant's potential in their chosen field of study and provide insight into their academic dedication, character, and personal strengths.

Academic achievement is considered as part of the overall application, with GPA serving as one indicator of effort and commitment. Students from a range of academic backgrounds are welcomed and encouraged to apply.

Finally, we recognize that students come to higher education through many different pathways. Whether transitioning directly from secondary education, returning to school after time in the workforce, or continuing beyond an associate degree or specialty certification, all stages of study are valued. The Helper Project is committed to supporting learners who are investing in their education and their future.
